RELATED MATTERS

1. Mentor Terminating Loan with Symbian/Ravensburg

On June 13, 2014, Chester Billingsley released the following statement to local press:

“MNTR Board, Advisors & Team --- We have orchestrated a cooperative exit from the Symbian / Ravensburg loan. Our next step will be to retrieve the $621,000 CDI fees that have been several times mentioned as refundable. We will start that process on Monday.

“This allows us to more freely proceed to raise funds without any competing obligations or guarantees. We will also rescind the recent loan to me that extended my share ownership by an extra 2 Million shares by exercising my warrants early, for the sole purpose of meeting the increased escrow requirements of the larger but now cancelled loan. It seemed fair to extend a loan to me only as long as the sole purpose was to lock up 100% of my shares for three years in an escrow that puts MNTR on NASDAQ. However, the intent was never for that to be a general loan for the personal benefit of CB, so it will be rescinded and things set back as they were.”

2. Origin of Force Majeure Statement of Ravensburg

Prior to the above Press Release considering Ravensburg, Billingsley requested the following of Ravensburg, on June 12, 2014:

“Symbian / Ravensburg -- I very much appreciate you taking the time especially to send out the force majeure press release. “

3. Mentor’s alleged Ownership Interest in Bhang Capital

Mentor has publicly stated that it owns an interest in Bhang Capital. Bhang disputes this statement and contends that Mentor does not now, nor has it ever had, any ownership interest in Bhang Capital and that Bhang Capital was a private investment made by individual Bhang stockholders outside of Bhang Chocolate.
