First Reports Show Marijuana Ballot Question Has Drawn $1.3 Million in Fund-raising; Already on Top Ten NJ Ballot Question List

Three groups supporting or opposing a November 3 ballot question that would legalize marijuana use in New Jersey so far have raised a combined $1.3 million and spent $733,523, according to initial disclosure reports filed with the New Jersey Election Law Enforcement Commission (ELEC).

Group	Raised	Spent	Pro/Con
Building Stronger Communities Action Fund Inc.	$ 700,100	$289,000	Pro
NJ CAN 2020	$ 574,558	$438,603	Pro
Don't Let NJ Go to Pot Inc.	$ 9,688	$ 5,920	Con
Totals	$1,284,346	$733,523

“Whether or not this year’s ballot question election turns out to be a true blockbuster in terms of funds spent, early reports show it already is among the top ten ballot questions in the state’s history,” said Jeff Brindle, ELEC’s Executive Director.

“The vote also is historic since it is the first marijuana-related public question to appear before New Jersey voters,” he added.

A political committee called Building Stronger Communities Action Fund Inc. has raised the most money to date. It has collected $700,100 and spent $289,000. Its main donor is The Scotts Company of Marysville, Ohio, which gave $700,000. It also gave $100,000 to NJ CAN 2020, a second committee supporting legalization.

According to news reports, Scotts launched a subsidiary in 2014 primarily to sell supplies to marijuana growers throughout the nation though it also is hoping to expand indoor urban gardening.<sup>1</sup>

Scotts Miracle-Gro reported in a press release July 29, 2020 that its marijuana-focused subsidiary, Hawthorne Gardening Company, earned $302.9 million in the most recent quarter, a 72 percent increase from the year before.<sup>2</sup>

In addition to its spending in this year’s election, Scotts paid $180,000 to a lobbying firm in 2017, 2018 and 2019 during years when legislation to legalize marijuana was being weighed by the legislature. Lawmakers decided to put the measure before the public after failing to get enough votes for passage.

During the same three years, more than $4 million was spent on lobbying, mostly by pro-marijuana groups, according to reports filed with ELEC.

The next biggest fundraiser is another advocate of legalization called NJ CAN 2020. It has raised $574,558 and spent $438,603. Its chief donor so far is American Civil Liberties Union of New Jersey, which has given $323,446.

Don’t Let NJ Go to Pot Inc. also has sprung up to wage opposition against the ballot initiative. Its initial report showed $9,688 in fund-raising from six individuals and $5,920 in spending.

While it is impossible to predict the cost of the marijuana ballot question contest, the $1.3 million raised so far already would rank tenth on the top ten most expensive New Jersey ballot questions based on inflation-adjusted numbers.

“Unlike states like California, which have laws that make it easy to put public questions before voters, just a handful of New Jersey referendum elections have drawn heavy spending,” Brindle said.

*Funds raised

Seventeen previous marijuana initiatives in other states have averaged $8.3 million in combined spending, according to the National Institute for Money in Politics. South Dakota, Montana, and Arizona are holding similar referenda this year.

A continuing political committee called Build a Better State PAC has been formed that appears to support one of the two other ballot questions this fall- one that would provide new property tax breaks to veterans. Its disclosure reports are not due until tomorrow (October 15).

There do not appear to be any committees set up to promote or oppose a third ballot initiative that would delay legislative redistricting if census data is received after February 15, 2021.
