“We are thrilled by the enthusiasm and support we are receiving from the industry about coming back together at MJBizCon,” said Chris Walsh, CEO and president of MJBiz. “One thing we have all learned through the pandemic is that relationships thrive on face-to-face connections. We can’t wait to bring the entire cannabis ecosystem together again to learn about new innovations, advances and changes that have been happening over the last 18-months.”

“We are increasing space for COVID safety and continue to work closely with the Las Vegas Convention Center and Clark County Nevada to ensure protocols are in place for a safe event,” added Jess Tyler, senior vice president of events and sales for MJBiz. “The positive feedback pouring in from our MJBizCon alumni who are excited to return to Las Vegas is overwhelming. We’re looking forward to returning better than ever.”

MJBizCon will be implementing a series of policies and procedures to ensure that we keep our attendees, exhibitors and staff safe while still providing a fun and engaging experience. More here.
